

A Path Not Taken

In, “A Path Not Taken: Too Few Of Today’s College Graduates Even Consider Serving In The Military” (City Journal, December 28, 2018), Steve Cohen discusses how too few of the best and brightest of today’s college graduates even consider serving in the military—and serving their country. Instead, they rush off to pursue paths in consulting or finance or entrepreneurship. That’s not just a loss for America, but for them.

To see the full article, click on the link below.

A Path Not Taken: Too Few Of Today’s College Graduates Even Consider Serving In The Military | City Journal