

What I Wish I Knew Then: Robbie Kaplan

In “What I Wish I Knew Then” (New York Law Journal, May 13, 2024), Robbie Kaplan, a founding partner of Kaplan Hecker & Fink, discusses her inspiration for becoming a lawyer, the advice she imparts upon fellow attorneys, the importance of asking for extensions, and the importance of trusting your gut.

“It’s really important in life and especially important as a lawyer to listen to yourself. If your gut or your instincts tell you that something is wrong, whether legally, factually, ethically, or otherwise, then chances are that it is wrong,” she said to partner Steve Cohen. “Don’t let other people who may have louder voices dissuade you from what your gut is telling you.”
