Jordan is the managing legal analyst at Pollock Cohen. Jordan graduated from Princeton University with a B.A. in Sociology. At Princeton, she served on the Sociology Department's Undergraduate Student Advisor Council and completed a senior thesis applying the sociological concepts of relational work and social ambivalence to the law. Her qualitative thesis analyzed a lawyer's role as a social and economic broker between courts and litigants in wrongful death cases of children.

As an undergraduate, Jordan played three years on Princeton's Varsity Women's Lacrosse team and acted as captain her senior fall. During her senior spring, Jordan served the team as an Undergraduate Assistant Coach while finishing her degree.

As a former college athlete, Jordan enjoys staying active and coaching for local youth lacrosse clubs in her hometown of Richmond, Virginia. She recently trained for a half marathon and looks forward to doing another race.
